But when it comes to the prospect of increasing such aid the mood is one of pessimism: The Colonialism and Neo-Colonialism is now an unambiguously negative one that is widely used to refer to a form of global power in which transnational corporations and global and multilateral institutions combine to perpetuate colonial forms of exploitation of developing countries. Thus, European languages, belief systems, social, economic, and political systems replaced pre-colonial African ones.

As a theme of African philosophy, the term neocolonialism became widespread. Neo-colonialism is based upon the principle of breaking up former large Colonialism and Neo-Colonialism colonial territories into a number of small non-viable States which are incapable of independent development and must rely upon the former imperial power for defence and even internal security. As a reaction to the effects of colonialism, there was the need to find an alternative ideology for decolonization. Moreover, neocolonialism was integrated into the national liberation ideology of Marxism in Africa. Wiredu recommends the process of decolonization from two conceptual analyses:
