Instead of shoving self-promotion down your throats, I think this time I am going to just leave the link to my books hereand then ask you all what you like about fantasy, what you think of the current fantasy genre, and then what is one story you would like to read that hasn't been written? In the first book, the heroine has the ability of prophecy and is worried that is will drive her insane like it has her mother, and the hero is trying to sneak into their society to find out if his own is headed for inevitable war or if the war can be prevented, and in the second the heroine is a psychologist who has created an artificial way of granting the prophecy ability and the hero is a newly-promoted councilman who believes this could cause disaster.
